It Proved a Boomerang.

There can be no doubt that the war indemnity paid by France to Gormany after the six weeks war, was a boomerang to score up against Biomarck The good it did to France is inestimable Prior to the war there was an enormous amount of money locked up in the form of small savings. The appeal of the government to the people set this sum into profitable motion, and, to the amazement of the world, France paid off her creditor in less than half the stipulated time. This gave a vast impulse to business enterprise of all kinds, and since then France has steadily become more wealthy. In Gormany the effects were less beneficial. The huge influx of golds sent up prices with a rush. A mania for speculation set in, followed by the inevitable crisis. Most serious of all, however, was the unexpected discovery of France's strength. Biomarck intended to crippile her forever, but he only revealed her immense power, and this, of contest, necessitated the gignuite military burdens which year by year weigh more heavily upon Germany.—Gincinnati Enquirer.

Why should the young pspring auther be discouraged or become weary in well doing? We have a letter from one of them in which he says.

"Five years ago I submitted a short story to a certain magazine. It was returned immediately. I sent it to another. It came back. All told I have sent that same story to 27 magazines, great and small. It has been five years on the road, going and coming. But Executive Sent and Small it has been five years on the road, going and coming. But Executive Sent and South, also feelined it, and it was accupted, with thanks and a satisfactory cheok! Of course in that time the old editors of this certain magazine either died or resigned, and it must have fallen into the hands of some new man, who had not signed, and it must have failed into the hands of some new mun, who had not seen it before. But in five years time the postage on that manuscript amounts of to $1.750 l got three that figure for the form of the postage of the same of ed to $17.50! I got thrice that figure for it at last, so I am not groundling."

One will gather from the above that the "literary business" means this, if it means anything "Patience and shuffle the cards!"—Atlanta Constitu-

After the surface has been sevarnished and polished as to present a face as hard and smooth as glass it will appear as if the whole were one an broken surface, which is the highest perfection of art in Japanese work.

The Meal Ball.

Every mother should know how to prepare a meal ball, for it is one of the best of remedies to be used in excess of diarrhen or aumner complaint. To make one tica teacapful of wheat floar, quite locsely, in a piece of coarse mustlin. Drop it into a kettle of boiling salted water—salted as for making much—and let it boil nine hours. Re-
